

Global Korean Studies 국제한국학전공

◆ Mission

Global Korean Studies

The Department of Global Korean Studies (GKS) nurtures engaged, creative, global citizens and leaders of twenty-first century knowledge production through an integrated study of Korea from a global perspective. GKS students study various aspects of the global construction of modern and contemporary Korea in order to understand Korea constructed by the world, Korea constructing the world, and Korea understood by the world. In so doing, students gain not only an extensive knowledge of Korea but also learn how knowledge about Korea is produced, both in Korea and around the world. As future leaders in academia, creative industries, information technology, publishing, global journalism, government and non-governmental organizations, and entrepreneurship, GKS graduates bring knowledge of Korea to the world and a knowledge of the world to Korea.

Bachelor of Arts in Global Korean Studies

The Bachelor of Arts in Global Korean Studies Program provides an elite liberal arts education to the next generation of global leaders. Korea as an object of study presents students with the opportunity to understand the diverse ways that Korea is known on the peninsula and around the world, situating GKS students at a hub of international discourse. Studying at this global intersection, GKS students develop uniquely broad international perspectives, as well as exceptional analytical and communication skills. A deep knowledge of Korea and the practical skills of knowledge production—documentation and curation, quantitative and qualitative analysis, argument and creative expression as they are practiced with millennia-old and next-generation technologies—equips and positions students in GKS as global leaders of twenty-first century knowledge creation.
